Though Shanghai may not be regarded by all as the "model settlement" of the Far! that it is one of the most progressive com- and the usual crowd of gamblers. munities, if not the most progressive, on this side of the world. We cannot think formation of the municipal finances appears to warrant this claim for pre-eminence. Seven years ago, the estimated annual income as it appeared in the budget for ordered the minting of gold coin and the mint 1900 was under a million taels. For 1908 it is reported to "verge on two million tacls." The municipal outlay has apparently "Made in 1906, Chinese gold coin" in Chinese. kept more than level with this growth, and the chief satisfaction that the residents who pay the piper can be expected to take in these swollen figures will be based on their value sa evidence of the importance of Shanghai and its interests. Here and elsewhere in the Far East, of course, there is no likelihood that the vastness of those interests will ever now be under-rated, but it appears that in certain quarters in Europe, there are people whose official information does not carry them beyond the conviction that | cigarettes were smoked in Austria in 1996, and Shanghai is a little place on a Chinese river where a few intrusive and pertinacious foreigners have assembled to make the task of diplomacy less easy. Perhaps the figures slight error. The leading figures, as given in our Shanghai contemporary from an advance copy of the Budget, are thus set

The issue of £48,750 of debentures squares the sterling budget, and there is no present increase of taxation proposed, but apparently for want of funds. In addition to the usual sources of revenue, Land Tax Tls. 452,000, General Rate Tls. 860,000, Wharfage Charges Tls. 200,000, Licences, Tls. 392,780, and Rents from Municipal Properties, Tls. 36,950, there is a new one this year, entered as Contributions from Public Companies, Tls. 11,575. This, our contemporary explains, "includes, besides amounts from the Water and Gas Companies under the recent agreements Suite de Ballet "Coppelia," Delibes made with those bodies, a dividend expected from the Mutual Telephone Company when the new agreement is put through and a nominal Tls. 1,000 as royalty from the Tramway Company. Extra money is to be spent on police, a by no means unusual necessity in the case of such a rapidly growing place, though our contemporary suggests that the trouble with the Sikhs has perhaps convinced the Council that the policing of the Settlement demands a very much larger number of foreign sergeants and constables." Provision is, accordingly, made to increase the foreign branch of the Force to the maximum number the stations can accommodate, or 160 men exclusive of detectives. The actual additions allowed for, and contemplated as for the latter half of the year only, are ten sergeaute and

Other increases would naturally for progressiveness to note that, even while money is tight, the City Fathers have invested or proposed to invest Tls. 6,600 for motor cars for the Police, Health, and Public Works Departments. This may also excite feelings of envy in Hongkong. Bridge-building, a necessary and long wanted undertaking at Shanghai, responsible for most of the extraordinary expenditure.

Thirty years ago 2.3 cigarettes was the annual average consumption per capita of the whole when they get Home may correct this population. Last year the average was 145.3 per capita. In the same period the consumption of cigars decreased from 49.7 to 44.3 per capita. Last year 31,000,000 fewer cigars were smoked than in 1904, while cigarettes showed an increase of 167,000,000. The country's smoke bill last year was $200,000 more than in 1905. The receipts of the tobacco monopoly exceeded the expenses by more than $3,000,000.

According to the Tokyo Mainichi Count Rtagaki intends to relinquish his title and at the same time to distribute letters of advice to all the peers in Japan, impressing upon them the advisability of making the honorary titles of the five orders of nobility nonhereditary. Some of the reasons assigned for this step are that the creation of hereditary peers is not in accordance with the object that gave rise to the abolition of the feudal Bhogunate. Also, that the idea of regarding the hereditary peers as the protectors. of the Imperial Throne is deemed to be not only the Municipal Council feels obliged to let. in contradiction to the spirit of Japaness history some "urgently required" works stand over | but as serving to establish a fortress between the people and the Throne,

About two years ago the girl's father had gone abroad leaving her in the care of her mother, who however, went off some time later to console herself with another lover. The grandmoth r was then entrusted with the upbringing of the child. A few days ago the girl sickened, and died on Thursday. This so annoyed the old woman that she blackened the face of the dead girl with the bottom of a frying pan and afterwards got a man to assist her to carry the body outside. They had just deposited the body in the street and were moving off when an Indian constable came on the scene. They were both arrested, and his Worship ordered each to pay a fine of twenty-five dollars or go to prison for one month.

AN AMUSING ROGUE

At the Russian Consular Court, Shanghai, on 8th February, before Mr. L. Brodiansky, Vice. Consul. Simon Vednitchak was charged with having returned to Shanghai after having been deported by the Russian Consul General on the 10th January, 1903. Det. Iusp. McDowell stated that the accused had been captured in January, 1903, by the late Det. Sergt. Kingston, after an exciting chase along the Chapoo Road, and charged with eleven charges of larceny which consisted of stealing rolls of silk, furs, etc., valued at $1,500, from various shops in the Settlement. He was charged at the Consulate and was sent to Port Arthur for trial and was there sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Witness then went on to describe how he was going along the Band that morning and at the Custom House he saw the accused who had bright golden hair. Witness at first did not recognise him, but he followed him in a ricksha as far as Chapoo Road, when he remember d who the man was: He then took him into custody and the man acknowledged that he had been sent away from Shanghai at the time stated. Witness then pointed out to the Court that when the man had been arrested before, he had dark chestnut hair, whereas now it was a bright golden yellow or what was commonly known as a chemical blond, The accused was a dangerous character to have tricks and go round the shops again dropping carrying plunder. Witness would therefore ask that the accused be kept in custody until he could be sent away.

Accused, who was dressed in expensive furs. said in answer to the Court that after doing six | this port. months at Port Arthur, he went to Singapore. The climate there was so bot, that his hair which was formerly a dark brown had become bleached and turned to the bright golden yellow it now was. He did not know that he could not return to Shanghai, or he would never have come back. His Honour said he would invite the man to cave at once, and to keep him out of temptation.

AN OVERLOOKED VISITOR.

The Singapore Free Press of Feb. 2nd says:-There comes to us an echo of the last Afghan war in the fact that Ayub Khan, the erstwhile pretender to the Amirship of Afghanistan, was a fellow passenger, yesterday afternoon. with the Duke of Connaught to Hongkong Ayub Khan's chief claim to fame is his defeat. at Maiwand outside Kandahar, of General Burrows' small force on July 26th, 1880. The total British force, European and native, amounted to no more than 2,476; the Afghan army numbered not less than 25,000 men. Of his small force Geo. Burrows fost 1,109, nearly half. It was to rectify the situation thus created that Lord Roberts made his famous march from Kabul to Kandahar, completely defeating Ayub Khan in the first action. Ayub Khan eventually surrendered to the Indian Government on honourable terms. He has a residence provided for him at Lubore, and is in receipt of a pension of 20,000 rapees a month; the conditions that he should be considered "an honoured guest" have thus been faithfully fulfilled. He is accompanied his tour to China and Japan by Major White, of the Indian army. It is understood that this tour, was thoughtfully arranged by the Government while the present Amir. Habibullah Khan, is on his visit to India.

It has been remarked before that amateur theatricals in Hongkong reach a higher standard of perfection than in other parts of the Empire where professionals claim more attention. and this dictum is likely to become all the more acceptable to the public by the present production of the Amateur Dramatic Club. " Facing the Music" is a distinct success. Lest night's performance came up to the expectations of patrons, who, being accustomed to high class histrionic work from this combination, are, while not lacking in sympathy, inclined to criticism. and the fact that there was nothing heard last night but unqualified approval indicates better than words how well the amateurs played their

Mr. Charles Henry Darnley's farcical comedy depends for its success on a good stage presence and the ability of the actors to suggest or insinuate its finer points. The comedy is not rollicking. Neither is it very subtle. In some respects its humour is pronounced, but it is always effective. As the dramatis. personds are not "griffing" on the stage, but have proved themselves worthy of the positions entrusted to them, it practically goes without saying that they made the most of the

Under the designation of John Smith of London any man's identity may be carefully concealed, but when there is more than one of him in the same house, and when one is a clergyman and the other is a gay young man about town, and when both are married, with their -respective-wives-on-holiday,-possibilities-of-confusion arise. These are utilised by the author very skilfully, and a succession of mirthful misunderstandings and funny episodes keep the auditors in the best of humour from start to

Though the piece allows considerable individual scope a certain amount of co-operation is required. This was forthcoming last night. The comedy went with a swing throughout. There were no hitches, no hesitation. but a pleasing smoothness. On this result Messrs. R. Sutherland and John Robertson are to be congratulated. Their work, though not so apparent as those who figured before the footlights, was none the less real, and the success of the production was their success.

The cast was constituted as under :-

Fev. John Smith, Curate of St. Andrews, Mr A. W. J. WATT. Lt. Com. LLOYD-THOMAS. Dick Desmond, the other Mr. Smith's Guest, Mr. T. C. LETHBRIDGE. Mr. H. M. KENDALL Sergeant Duffeld, of Vine Street.

Dr. J. W. HARTLEY Mabel, the Curate's Wife, Miss C. Shelton Hooper. Mrs. VAN DER WONDE. Miss Fotheringay, of the Bijou Theatre.
Miss. MARCHANT. Mrs. Pouting, the other Mr. Smith's House-

not too much to say that Lieutenant-Commander Lloyd Thomas as the "other Mr. Smith." and his sister Miss Lloyd Thomas as Mrs. Pouting, the housekeeper, were the mainstay of the production. Miss Lloyd Thomas is a decided a quisition to the ranks of local thespians. She is perfectly at ease on the stage, and acquits herself with all the composure and verve of a professional. Her interpretation of the part of Mrs. Ponting, the other Mr. Smith's housekeeper, who believed in having "a little bit on" was very artistic, and she gained the warm encomiums of the audience. The role of Miss Fotheringay was admirably taken by Miss Marchant, who carried herself throughout production with all the assurance of the actress she pourtrayed. Miss Shelton Hooper deserved the hearty applause that was frequently accorded her. In the representation of Mabel, the curate's wife, she was responsible for a good deal of fun, and her acting throughout was characterised by feminine grace and charm, Mrs. Van der Wonde filled the role of Nora in a very accomplished manner, and in the more difficult situations displayed great dramatic power. As already indicated the bulk of the work fell to Lient. Commander Lloyd Thomas, who certainly rose to the occasion-He surpassed all his previous efforts. As "the other Mr. Smith" he supplied most of the fun and that without any boisterousness or exaggeration. His every word and action were natural, and his performance was one which would do credit to a professional. Few amateurs can excel him in his presentation of the comical or the humorous, and, as he showed last night, he is also at home in the more "dramatio" element of stage performances. Meritorious indeed was the representation of the Rev. John Smith by Mr. A. W. J. Watt. Unctuous, but natural, he played the parson to the manner born, and the audience rewarded him with unstinted applause. Colonel Duncan interesting, for they invariably give the reader the impression that they come directly out of the writer's experience. This volume of sea comedies comprises nautical yarns of a work-a-day life on the ocean wave and at ike us as notually true, or so perfectly grounded in the actual as to be true for practical pur. poses. They do not bear the slightest strain after effect; but are told in the style that one might expect to hear from an old "shellback" seated on the quay after finishing a profitable day's work. By the time the book is finished the reader will have learned a good deal about senfaring life that he did not know before.

REVIEWS.

The Red Burgee. By MOBLEY ROBERTS. London. T. Fisher Unwin.

The Soul Stealer. By C. RANGER GULL. London. T. Fisher Unwin.

An eminent London surgeon discovers a means whereby a person's thoughts can be collected and thrown upon a screen in the form of a picture. This is the stupendous revelation which Mr. Gull has to make in his new volume, with the result that he provides a story of the wildest imagination. A young man loved by the girl upon whom the surgeon has bestowed his affections, is, anknown to himself, the subjectupon which the thought spectroscope is first brought though it may exist—this is a question to be into use. At a demonstration before men of science an assistant meddles with the machinery and produces a tragic surprise for the audience. This is where the tale concludes and the reader is left wondering what strange remance he may Boxt expect from this imaginative author.

Andrew Goodfellow. By HELEN H. WATSON. London, Maomillan & Co.

a pretty remance of the days of Nelson charmingly set in the picture que old town of Plymouth Dock. The heroine is loved by a young naval officer, who loses his life at the Battle of Trafalgar after his fiancée has been trapped into a marriage with a scheming scoundrel. By reason of the fact that Dorothy Lovel is unaware, until the death of her mother, that she is of noble birth many complications arise and form the basis of the story, which though somewhat sad, is full of interest and likely to attract considerable attention.

As Ye Have Sown, by DOLF WYLLANDE London, George Bell and Sons,

Another interesting and unusually well written story of the prevailing conditions of society. Those who move in "the air that dukes and duchesses breathe" are not generally beloved by the author who lays bare all the unreality of life in certain sets of the upper circle. Then the great middle class, the backbone of the nation, comes in for unstinted praise. the characters presented from the commoners being of exceptional virtue. The heroine of the work, one of the haute noblesse, does not discover the flaw in her birth until near the end of the chapter when she is overwhelmed by a sea of trouble. She is rescued, however, by one of the middle class, who carries her off to New Zealand and to a happy life.

New Chronicles of Don Q. By K. and HESKETH PRICHARD, London, T. Fisher Unwin.

We have here a dozen tales of mysterious life among the mountains in the romantic heart of. Spain. Don Q is a man of high birth and lineage who has been driven to the lawlers shelter of the sierra where his generosities courage. chivalry and fidelity to the poorest who served him form the subject of these new chronicles. They are full of deeds daring and adventure, and will appeal to most classes of reader. Mr Stanley L. Wood has illustrated the volume with several of his telling pictures, and a charming new movel is the result.

A Plea for Power for the Church of England By Anglicanus. London. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Price 61, net. Published with a view to assist in saving England from again being paralysed or crushed certain of attention at the hards of the clergy. The author submits there is a real danger for the country, and this he seeks to avert by sir ving for increased power to the true church. "Anglicanus" has been a close observer of organisation of the Church, and the case set before his readers has much to commend it to earnest consideration.

The British Australasian states that Mr. G. B. Austin, one of the probitects of the Victorian Public Works Department, has been granted twelve months' leave of absence, and is now on his way to England having been summoned by the War Office for the purpose of submitting to the arti'lery experts plaus of an invention he has evolved for the sighting of big i guns. No particulars of Mr. Austin's idea have been disclosed, but it is stated that the invention will enable big guns to be fired over s distance up to twelve miles with the same accuracy as at comparatively short ranges.

SHIPMASTER'S DISMISSAL.

COMPANY REGISTRATION AT SHANGHAS.

A claim by Capt. E. B. Hayes against the s.s. The works of Morley Roberts are always Culmore's owners for $1,380 wages and damages for wrongful dismissal at Shanghai opened up various points of interest. On February 5th | certainly call attention to it to the Board of Sir Havilland de Sausmarez gave judgment as follows: -The question as to whether this action is properly brought on the Admiralty side of the Court is one into which I need not go. wish to express no opinion on it as I have had no argument and I form no opinion. The action is brought by the captain against the ship and he in substance asks for damages for wrongful dismissal. The defences raised by Mr. Jones are three; first that the dismissal is justified, second that he (plaintiff) accepted his dismissal and third that there was no necessity for notice. As regards the plaintiff accepting the dismissal I do not think that that has been proved; certainly very shortly after he understood that his services would be no longer required, he in fact asked both Dong Ting-kee and Mr. Sander for three months waves and in one case for his passage home, that I do not think that that plea can prevai. Then there is the general question, as whether the captain is entitled to notice. think the general principle on which a man entitled to some notice has not been in any way controverted by the arguments which I hav heard and I think that if a dismissal is wrongful a man in the position of master of one of the steamers plying on this coast is certainly entitled to some notice. As to what noticeunless there is some custom in the port, which l certainly has not been proved in this case, determined in each particular case depends upon the general facts. Now as to whether this dismissal was justified we have various complaints as to the faulty navigation on the part of the plaintiff of this vessel. The case of running. asherent the South East Promontory is one point; the complaints of two other masters navigating that extremely difficult riverthe Peiho-is another, and the fact that he toucked the bottom on three occasions between The first published novel of Mrs. Watson is | Nauking and Kiukiang is another. Then there is the complaint of his navigation in the Gulf of Pechili, on his journey from Taku to Newchang, and others, which I think may be generally taken as covered by the complaint of the charterers as to delay in navigation owing to unskilfulness or want of knowledge. As regards the running on shore plaintiff himself has explained that the engines of the ship did not go astern at once and it certainly seems to me that one engineer who cannot always be below-as is the case if there is only one engineer on board-is likely to lead to confusion and possible mishaps. I cannot find that the captain is to blame for this.

Mr. Jones-One foreign engineer. Ther were other Chinese engineers. His Lordship-Yes, one certificated engineer This is a British ship or supposed to be one Then there is the case of the letter from the two) captains regarding plaintiff's navigation in the Peiho. A Mr. Sander very fairly put it you never quite know which of these captains will say most against the other, but always seem to think the other one is in the wrong and he doesn't seem to attach very much importance to this particular, dispute. And then there is the question of touching the bottom near Nankingand the explanation given by the captain, that the pilot did not come on board though he waited three hours, seems to me

all events to deprive the defendants don't think he acted unreasonableness. 1 wrongly; no harm happened; there was certain delay, and it is a question of exercise of discretion. Then there remain the complaints of the charterers. Those seem to me in the aggregate to be somewhat serious but at the some time I do think that when the plaintiff approached the defendant's agents here he was at once told that the ship is going to be sold and that Mr. Dong Ting-kee gave him notice; that fact alone would very much strengthen the | and new. The furnishing of this lobby being plaintiff's case or weaken that of the defendants, and then on the top of this I have this reference which was signed by Mr. Dong Ting-kee. cannot say that I was entirely satisfied with the way the plaintiff gave his evidence about this, but at the same time I must point out it is an extremely serious thing to certify to the conduct of a master and to the reason for discharging him which is not entirely accordance with the facts. Mr Dong Ting-kee could have had this explained to him. chooses to put his chop upon it on behalf of the Ching Dah Steamship Company, as managing owner, without any such explantion being given to him. If he chooses to do that he must be held responsible at all events for what he has done. He might be recommending comebody who is entirely unfit for recommendation as a master and he might put a steamer or vessel into very considerable denger in consequence of giving a recommendation which would induce | master. A man has no rightto sign a document of this kind like that, and I should assume under those circumstances-I think I ought to assume-that this has not been signed in the nothing of exceptional absolutely half-hearted way which he says he signed it. At all events if it was be must take the consequence of having done so and he gives his reason for discharging the plaintiff in consequence of his requiring his services no longer as the ship is for sale. Taking all the facts into consideration-although there were these complaints and although they may, and probably did, to a very great extent, weigh with Mr. Dong Ting-kee-I find that on the whole the dismissal was not justified. the question of damages and I lifts, speaking tubes, and staircases reserved for in mind the nature of Chinese staff. this vessel, of which there has been no evidence to show that the master had been long in the employ of this company before. appliance in the way of bells, lights, lifts, The plaintiff had only been in the service a few staircases and means of communication months and under these circumstances I shall to be found. The building is undoubtedly allow him $500. $250 is his monthly salary and without a rival in China, and a credit alike to he was engaged on the first of the month and the architects, Messrs. Becker and Bardecker, there is a certain amount left in December so to the Club Committee, and to the German by meditoval superstition, this pamphlet is that I will allow him damages for January and February and the remainder of December, which comes to something like $500. His Lordship, in reply to Counsel, said that plaintiff was entitled to taxed costs. His Lordship added he might mention in this particular case brought to his notice, that this vessel, which was not owned by an individual British subject, that it was a question whether it was entitled to be a British ship atall. He referred to section I.B. of the Merchant Shipping Act which laid down that a Body Corporate must have its particular place of business at the place of registration, and from the evidences before him it seemed to him, prima facie, that the particular place of position of this company might be Hongkong but was in fact Shanghai. This was a matter which he should certainly have to bring to the notice of the proper authority, viz , the Consul General. Mr. Jones said that no doubt this company. as his Lordship would see, was formed for the purpose of rouning this one particular ship and there had been no investigation into the company's business at the present time. His Lordship-Prima facie the place of registration is the place of business, but not necessarily.

Mr. Jones-They have no doubt complied with the Hongkong Ordinances.

His Lordship-No doubt, but that does no make them necessarily a British ship. I shall consider the question and after having look ed at the cases as to the question of what is the particular place of business I

Mr. Jones suggested that if his Lordship reported the matter to the Board of Trade, there might be a possibility of establishing some means of registering companies in Shaughai.

His Lordship—That would no doubt be an excellent thing.

FINEST CLUB IN ORIENT.

THE NEW CLUB CONCORDIA AT PHANGHAL.

Feb. 6th was red-letter day in the history of the German community in Shangbai. The gorgeous club nouse on the Bund was opened. Approaching the building from the Bund one passes up a broad flight of stairs to the gorgeons entrance hall and grand staircase. hall is a very fine specimen of decorative art, combination with solidity of structure. bayed in the supports of the staircase is a very fine fountain, the gift of the Russo-Chinese Bank. On the wall opposite this fountain is a fine tile picture, a reproduction of a famous Dutch painting, and the gift of the Dutch Bank. In the cellars are elaborate arrangements for the heating, lighting, and ventilation of the building. The heating is carried out by means of steam, and in the ventilation the most approved modern methods, specially adapted for Shaughai, are in vogue. The efficient heating depends upon the use of best cake, thereby the sctual consumer. minimising the smoke nuisance. On this floor, too, are well-lighted, uniformly heated wine cellers, capable of storing wines for a long siege, if such an impossibility should take place. return to the first floor and entrance hall by a stuircase connected with the Jinkee Road entrance. This staircase communicates with every floor, but is chiefly intended as a private entrance for resident members and persons having business with the secretariat. From this entrance we pass along a corridor on one side of which is the secretariat whilst on other are the reading and billiard rooms. The secretariat offices are simply but substantially furnished with every requisite. The reading room is a beautiful specimen of chaste workmanship teak. At the upper end are several cosy cornern where one may read or write in practical privacy. In this room is housed an excellent library of reference books, and here are to be found also the chief periodicale. The lighting of the library is worthy of special note as it is carried out on the indirect method, that is to say, the light is produced out of view of persons in the room and is equally diffused by means of reflection. The billiard room is a commodious and cheerful apartment containing eix tables, with suitable lighting arrangements. Next to the billiard room, and occupying the whole front of the building, is the bar, which consists of two sections, one surmounted by a fine view of Bremer, the other by a view of Berlin. The fittings of the bar room, which are in the finest style, are the gift of the Norddentscher Lloyd S.S. Co. In the barroom is also a choice grand father's clock, the gift of the Swiss members of the Club.

It may be well to mention here that, though the Club is prependerstingly German, it is not exclusively so, and its cosmopolitan cheracter is illustrated by the appearance in the stained glass windows of the arms of various non-Germanic states. The grand staircase, leading from the first to the second floor, is the realisation in Japanese marble of a very fine conception, the balasters, pilasters, and other adoruments being quite palatial. At the head of this grand staircase is an entrance lobto the main dining-room. In this lobby are a fine bust of the Kaiser and two mural decorations illustrating Shanghai, old the gift of the German captains in the China service, the lobby is to be known as the "Captains' Corner." From the Captains' Corner we pass to the main dining-room. This is a beautiful apartment the mural decorations of which are not yet quite finished, but the scheme is so far advanced that it is easy to grasp. The wall is divided by pilasters on each of which is to be a panel picture of some famous German city, surmounted by its coat of arms. The frieze between each pilaster is also occupied by similar decorations, the coat-of srms in this case being below the picture. At one and of the hall is a gallery for musicians, and one side opens on to the upper balcony.

Passing from the main dining room we pass through a smaller one to a suite of three rooms intended for private parties. Of these rooms one may be used as dining room, the next as a drawing room and the third as a card room or cosy corner. In the first of these rooms is the owner of that steamer to take an incompetent | a piece of fine bronze statuary presented to the Club by the officers of the troops stationed in Shanghai in 1900 and 1901. On the opposite side of the corridor from these rooms is the fine library, chastely formished in dark green wood, and containing about 20,000 volumes, beyond this again are card rooms. Again ascending we come to the residential quarters, and these are veritable homes of chastened luxury. Beautifully lighted, with airy balconies, each suite comprises either two or three rooms, solidly and elegantly furnished. These are already fully occupied. On the floor above this is the colinary department, replete with every modern convenience, and communicating with all dining rooms by means of

"TIMES" ON HONGKONG.

CONTINUED DEPRESSION IN BUSINESS. " he following notes from the Times Financial and Commercial supplement appear to deserve local reproduction :-- It was hoped towards the end of 1905 that the coming year would prove a botter one than that just closing; it was never thought that there could be a worse one, so far as trade was concerned. As a matter of fact even a quieter state of general trade has prevailed, and such a critical position has not existed, for very many years back,

During the early months of the year heavy floods devastated the neighbouring provinces, and in consequence the first rice crop was nearly a total failure. Piracy in the Canton delta has been rife. The efforts of the late Vicercy to jut it down, if sincere, were very feeble, and the fact that river steamers under the British flag have been at acked and Europeans murdered shows how daring these pirates have become and to what an extent trade is hampered by the risks merchants bave to take in shipping to the interior. Only a strong hand our suppress this piracy, perhaps more accurately described as highway robbory, and it remains to be seen whether the new Viceroy poss saes that strong

Nothing has a more widespread effect in disturbing trade than debasement of the coinage, and in the last two years the Mint authorities in China have been flooding the country with anbsidiary coins which are short in weight of silver. In consequence the discount on these has risen to 7 per cent at times, a d thus a merchant in the interior who is buying from Hongkong has to send $167 in their currency to buy $100 worth of goods here. The usual discount has been 2 to 3 per cent, so that prices now, apart from

EFFECTS OF THE TYPHOON. On the top of all this came the terrible typhoon of September 18th, with its destruction of property, damage to shipping, and loss of merchandise. For a week trade was completely paralysed, vessels being unable to load or unload owing to the want of lighters and the destruction of so many wharves. It was some weeks before the influx of native craft from the coast relieved pressure somewhat, but it will be many months before fresh lighters are built and working, and, when it is considered how much of the capital of the colony has been lost in the sea, so to speak, it is remarkable that matters are no worse than they are.

One side issue of the typhron has been the swamping of the country with damaged goods, which were sold at auction. Besides interfering with legitimate trade by filling its outlets, these auctions have drained the Chinese of a large proportion of their ready cash, and thus made them less able to deal in undamaged cargo.

Towards the close of the year prospects appear more hopeful, and, providing the crisis in the yarn trade can be tided over, business should be better for all concerned in the near future. The second rice crop has proved a very good one, money is plentiful, and the discount on subsidiary coins is decreasing owing to a largely-decreased output from the Canton Mint, whose authorities were eventually driven to realize the evil results of their former overproduction.

RISE IN EXCHANGE. The chief feature has been the stendy rise in | regularly. exchange, which at the beginning of the year was only 2s. 0.0d., and has since touched 2s. 344 for telegraphic transfers. This has had rather an unsettling effect on conditions here. Many have seized the opportunity of convert. ing their investments in local enterprises into sterling-in other words, capital has been withdrawn from the colony to gold-using. countries, and in consequence there has been a depreciation in value of local stocks. Money, however, has not been so tight amongst the Chinese, although they have not been in a ties offered.

IMPORT TRADE ANALYSED. In consequence of large speculative buying on the part of the Chinese dealers, and a greatly decreased consumption, there are now on hand at prices much above the present value, having been purchased at lower rates of exchange. A very critical position thus exists, as the buyers seem unable to take up their contracts and are on the verge of bankruptcy. Should no arrangement be made to tide over the difficulty, the consequences to Hongkong will be disastrous. The losses to Europeans and Chinese alike will be very great indeed, and the whole native credit will be shaked. Efforts are being made to effect a settlement, but until after China New Year in February next there will be no confidence established, even if then.

In English yarns business has been on a limited-scale, partly owing to the heavy stocks | keeper in Sampeng. carried over from last year and also because the dealers have been hampered by their heavy holdings of Indian yarn. What has been done was profitable, and, as stocks are light, prospects | peng. for this year are somewhat better.

In Manch-ster goods business has also been of an unsatisfactory nature, more especially so in the case of white than in the case of grey piece goods. There has been a greatly decreased "offtake," and stocks held in dealers' hands have had to be realized at poor prices. Fresh business has been lacking owing to the rising exchange, as dealers were afraid to commit themselves and then find later on that they could get the goods cheaper. The market however, seems bare of slocks towards the end of the year, and if exchange drops to any extent there should be more confidence and a large

In the fancy goods as well as in the sundry goods business, it is becoming increasingly evident that there is a change of fashion amongst the Chinese. Foreign clothing material, caps, boots, etc., are greatly in demand, and, although the Chinese have not yet adopted European dress, as the Japanese did, they are taking steps toward it by having clothes of their own style made of foreign material such as serge, light tweeds, &c. The schools, how-In underwear a large busicess has been done in singlets, those for summer wear being imported | become that a factory has been established to be paid, and the policy to be received, accused manufacture the goods locally, and it seems to adding that he would bring it himself.

decreasing. The metal trade has also been dull, and little if any profit has been made. Wire nails seem to be in greater demand, and steel plate cuttings are taking the place of other varieties of scrap. The high price of all metals renders business | had been instituted. very difficult.

In flour conditions have steadily improved throughout the year, and, although heavy losses were incurred during the early months, these | he did. He was not authorised to receive any have been recouped to some extent by good money. Accused acted as interpreter for him profits later on. Australian product is coming in ever-increasing quantities, although it has not proved so profit able to the merchants and dealers here as the American. The market is now in a state o suspense, a large flour mill will shortly be be opened here with a capacity of 8000 sucks per diem, and it is expected that this local production will be sold at chesper rates than the imported flour.

The chief of these is, of course, si k. There has been a fair average yield, say, a total for the season of nearly 40,000 bales, and latterly the quality has been very good. At the beginning of the year it was feared that Japanese competition would be severely felt, the yen being on a lower par than the dollar, and an advantage the Chinese producers had enjoyed for over the past five years having been transferred to their opponents. The demand for silk, however, was such that all available supplies were absorbed. and, with a continually strengthening market prices have steadily advanced. The dealers now ovidently look for a decline in exchange, as they are holding back all their stock in the hope of ebtaining higher dollar values later. In other exports, such as ginger and soy, the native dealers appear satisfied with the year. The ginger crop was, however, a small one, and practically no stock is left over till next season. One reason for the better feeling is that the swamping of the home markets by one particular firm has ceased and supplies are only going forward in such quantities as can be taken

LOCAL INDUSTRIES. There is little that is favourable to report under this heading. The dock company had a considerable amount of repair work in consequence of damage done by the typhcon, and the smaller engineering firms are very busy building lighters; but, spart from this business has been dull. The cotton mill has suffered from the state of the yarn market. and in cement the high exchange has suabled the European produce to compete on more favourable terms with the local works. The position to avail themselves of the opportuni- largest industry-sugar refining-has suffered from various causes, and profits are for the present very small.

The story of how a useless insurance was effected on a shop in Sampeng, at Bangkok, recently destroyed by fire, was unfolded in the British Court for Siam when a Chinese broker named Chin Guan Seng was charged with obtaining 2 0 Ticals by false pretonces from another Chinaman named Choon Chin, a shop-

ECCE DEUS CONFUCIUS.

Throughout the previnces, the chief civil authority, accompanied by the subordinate civil and military officials, goes to the temple twice a year to worship the Sage Confucius. On the altar are an incouse vase and two large lighted candles... ' A table in front of this altar is spread with bowls of grain, goblets of wine, while on the t and West sides are tables with vessels of sorts of food. In the centre of the Hall

Hitherto the worship of Confucing, as Walters | rate. says, cannot properly be called religious, for the Chinese had not made Confucius a God. The Heaven. To be consistent, then, only the Emperor should be allowed to worship him. That would relieve the schools of the difficulty of worshipping the sage's tablet. Besides, an altar of like proportions to the altar of Heaven should be speedily erected for the new co-equal of Shang Ti, or does the recent move prove that can the elevation of Confucius be other than ruled fairly steady at $128/129. No matter what honours may be heaped on him by the Emperor, he can never take the place of a deity Scholars no longer believe in any Emperor having power to make Gods, as in the good old days. It is late in the day to seek to elevate a good and great man to deity. The students know too much to sanction such an apotheosis. They know that ! Confucius was neither all-wise nor all-knowing, and the Nan Fung Pao taunts the Conservatives with a gibe that if he were then they ought to stick to their guns, and cast out all extra-Confucian knowledge to the dogs. They will hardly renture to go that length. Mountime, we curiously wait what concection the Board of Rites and the Board of Education will evolve in the way of new rites in honour of Confucius Dons or Divus, - Shanghai Mercury.
